About Cat Adoption Team

Our Mission

CAT’s mission is to save the lives of homeless cats and to work with our community to provide feline expertise and quality programs and services for people and cats.

Currently We Achieve This Mission By

- Providing shelter, medical care, evaluation, and treatment to cats who have become homeless
- Finding homes for the cats and kittens in our care
- Providing people who care for cats with resources, education, and support to help keep human-animal bonds strong and prevent cats from becoming homeless
- Offering low-cost spay/neuter services to cat owners in need to prevent the births of unwanted litters
- Working closely with other animal organizations to implement projects and programs that positively impact cats at a community and regional level

Our Guiding Values

- Compassion for cats: We focus on the individual welfare and future of each cat in need
- Expertise: We strive to be experts in cat welfare, health, behavior, sheltering, and related programs
- Respect for people: We treat our employees, volunteers, donors, clients, and community with respect
- Impact: We have a significant and measurable positive impact on the cats in our community
- Collaboration: We work with other individuals and organizations to save more lives
- Integrity: We act with integrity and value transparency
- Excellence: We strive for excellence in every aspect of our work

Welcome to the Family!

Dear Adopter,

Congratulations! You are now the proud parent of a wonderful cat companion. The Cat Adoption Team (CAT) thanks you for helping us save another life and committing to provide loving care to a new feline friend (or two!).

Your adoption fee goes directly back to helping other cats and kittens in need. Funds from adoption fees, donations, and retail sales ensure that shelter cats at CAT can receive quality medical treatment, spay/neuter surgeries, appropriate housing and enrichment, foster care, and adoption opportunities as they await their new homes.

CAT is the Pacific Northwest’s largest feline-only cat shelter. Cats are housed at our Sherwood shelter and various offsite adoption locations and foster homes throughout the Portland metro area. CAT has a full-service veterinary hospital onsite; all the cats and kittens who come to us receive all the time and care they need to find an adoptive home.

Stay in touch with CAT through our website at catadoptionteam.org, and find us on social media sites such as Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram. We encourage you to share photos of your new pet on social media as well (#catalumni)!

Again, congratulations on this special new member of your family. We wish you many years of happiness together. Please don’t hesitate to contact your adoption counselor or the shelter with any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

Karen Green
Executive Director

Life with Your New Kitten

CAT designed this booklet to address many of the questions you may have about how to care for your new kitten; however, please contact your Adoption Counselor using the information on your adoption contract if you need additional information or advice.

You can also check our website for answers to behavior and other questions: catadoptionteam.org/resources.

Prepare Your Home

Before you give your new kitten the run of the house, it is important to “kitty-proof” (for his/her safety as well as protecting your belongings) and to make sure you have all the basic supplies. Here is a quick checklist to get you started:

- Create a safe room, such as a bathroom (close the toilet lid!), home office, or guest room, for your new kitten’s first few days. Place the litter box at one end with the food, water, and bed at the other. Allow your kitten to adjust at his/her own pace. It is especially important to keep your kitten in this safe place for at least 10 days if you have other pets in the home.

- Cover electrical cords so your kitten can’t chew on them. You can also coat the cords with bitter apple liquid spray, which can be found at pet supply stores.

- Remember, kittens like to explore and can get on top of most anything. Until your new kitten learns right from wrong, it is a good idea to put away breakables that may be knocked off a shelf by an exploring cat. You may find your kitten exploring in areas you’d never dream of—like your refrigerator, a washing machine/dryer, behind drawers, and inside a box spring, sofa, or chair. Keep an eye out to make sure you don’t accidentally trap your kitten!

- Toys: Kittens love to chase and hunt down toys. Avoid toys with small parts that can break off and be ingested. Yarn, string, and curling ribbon will cause problems inside your kitten’s digestive tract if swallowed. To be safe, stick with toys specifically designed for felines.

- Many plants are toxic to cats, so do a thorough check of your home before bringing home your pet. Here are some of the most common household plants that are toxic:

  Amaryllis  Cyclamen  Daisies  Holly  Lilies (all)  Poinsettias
  Baby’s Breath  Daffodils  Geraniums  Ivy  Mistletoe  Tulips

  For a complete list, visit: aspca.org/pet-care/poison-control/plants

- Help reduce potential human allergies by getting a good HEPA air cleaner and remember to vacuum frequently. Consider designating a “no cat allowed” room (or rooms) if the potential for an allergy problem exists.
The First Few Days

Your kitten may be very uncertain for the first few days. Be patient and take things slowly.

A frightened or unsure kitten’s tendency is to hide. Let him/her do that, and know that s/he will eventually become comfortable and come out. Under no circumstances should you force a kitten from his/her hiding place by pulling legs or other body parts. Encourage your kitten to come out safely by enticing him/her with food or toys.

Normal Behaviors During the First Days at Home

It is not uncommon for a kitten to exhibit the following behaviors during the first few days. However, if issues persist, please contact CAT or your veterinarian for guidance:

- Not eating very much
- Upset stomach, vomiting, diarrhea
- Hiding (make sure your cat has safe, comfortable access to food, water, and litter box)
- Not using the litter box (see page 8)

Things You Can Do to Help

- Be calm and patient.
- At first, keep your kitten in a single, small room (such as a bathroom) to give him/her time to adjust.
- Gradually give your kitten access to other parts of the house as s/he shows signs of confidence and is successfully using the litter box. Allow several weeks for your new kitten to adjust.
- Keep your kitten indoors. Don’t leave him/her unattended around open windows and loose screens, as a frightened kitten could easily break out.
- Provide plenty of fresh water and high-quality food.
- Initially, keep your new kitten separated from other pets (see page 18).
- If you are taking your new kitten home during a busy time, such as birthdays and holidays, be diligent about providing him/her with a quiet area away from the action. You may wish to limit over-handling of your new kitten too. A loud household with lots of foot traffic can be especially stressful for a kitten who is still getting used to a new home.
- Kittens get bored easily, so provide lots of toys, daily interaction, and other entertainment to help your kitten adjust. If you have a windowsill with a view of the yard, open the curtains or blinds so your kitten can get a view of the world outside.
Understanding Your Kitten’s Behavior

Never hit or physically punish your kitten. Besides being unkind, it will not teach him/her anything except to fear you, which could make your kitten behave aggressively toward you.

Your kitten is full of curiosity and knows no boundaries. It is important to watch and correct undesired behaviors from an early age. Distraction is a great tool for getting a kitten to stop what s/he’s doing. There is a variety of safe toys to use like wand toys, laser pointers, plastic balls, or crumpled paper balls. Make sure the toys don’t include anything that your kitten could swallow, such as strings, ribbons, yarn, or tails on toy mice.

A kitten has to scratch as much as a dog has to wag his tail. The kitten is not being naughty. You must provide appropriate options, like scratching posts so s/he doesn’t use your furniture, woodwork, and curtains (see page 12).

Also it is important to trim your kitten’s nails every 2-3 weeks. This will save your skin and anything else s/he decides to climb up! Plus, it is a good idea to get your kitten used to being handled for nail trims (see page 14).

Never use your hand as a toy. You’ll be very sorry later when your kitten gets bigger and can really hurt you. Hands are best for showing affection, so a kitten should not be allowed to attack, bite, or scratch your hand. Always use a toy when playing with him/her—a wand toy will keep your hands especially safe. Rough play with your kitten can encourage aggressive behavior and should be avoided (see page 11).

If your kitten does bite you, do not jerk your hand away. This may cause him/her to clamp down harder. Either wait for him/her to let go, slap a table or your leg with your other hand to make a sound that startles the kitten into letting go, or gently push the hand being bitten towards him/her. Then say “No!” and move away. Do not pay attention to him/her until sometime later. Eventually your kitten will get the message that the inappropriate behavior will end playtime and the attention s/he wants (see page 12).

Kittens who are left alone for long periods of time may suffer from under-stimulation and loneliness. Many kittens will even cry at night from boredom and frustration—keeping you awake. It is imperative that s/he gets several structured playtimes during the day and especially before you go to bed to relieve boredom/loneliness. Sometimes getting him/her a kitten buddy is the best answer, as s/he will have an always-available playmate. If another cat isn’t the right fit for you, a cozy stuffed animal can make a good friend for a kitten too.

Litter Box Training

The general rule of thumb is to have one litter box per cat, plus an extra box for insurance. Here are some tips that will help ensure that your kitten uses the litter box:

- Place the litter box in a convenient location for your kitten to find.
- Keep litter boxes away from heavy traffic areas and the kitten’s feeding area. Be certain a shy kitten can access the box without feeling threatened or exposed.
- Clean the litter box every day.
- When you first arrive home with your new kitten, place him/her in the litter box a few times to be sure s/he knows the location.
- You may need to experiment with different types of litter or boxes until you find the right one(s) for your kitten. We recommend avoiding scented litters. Kitten Attract™ brand litter is a good option to try for a kitten who is not using the litter box.
- If your kitten makes a mistake, wipe up the urine with a tissue and put the tissue in the litter box (in the case of defecation, pick up the feces with tissue and then place feces in the litter box). This will help your new kitten smell where s/he should be going.
- Any accidents should be cleaned with an enzyme-based cleaner (Nature’s Miracle® or Urine Off®, for example) or a solution of one-half white vinegar and one-half water.
- NEVER yell or rub a kitten’s nose in feces or urine—this does not help.

Not Using the Litter Box?

Determine if the problem is inappropriate elimination (urinating or defecating outside the box) or territorial marking (urine spraying). Each has different suggested remedies. It’s also important to make sure your kitten does not have an illness or injury that is causing this behavior. A kitten who is not using the litter box appropriately should be taken to your veterinarian for evaluation as soon as you notice the issue. House soiling is a common symptom of urinary tract infections and other illnesses that can be treated; some of these illnesses may be brought on by the stress of moving into a new environment.

Other possible reasons for house soiling:

- Your kitten may not have learned the location of the litter box—this is especially true of very young kittens. If your house is large or has multiple levels, place litter boxes in several locations and/or on each floor.
- Your kitten does not like the brand or type of litter. Try some others simultaneously in separate boxes, observe which one your kitten uses, and then switch to that type/brand in all boxes.
- The litter box is not clean. You should clean your litter box (scoop out soiled areas) at least once daily. The entire pan should be emptied completely, washed with a mild unscented detergent, and refilled with fresh litter monthly (more often for non-clumping litter).
• The litter box has been disinfected with a strong-smelling solution and needs to be rinsed.
• Your kitten is soiling in an area previously used for elimination by another pet. Clean thoroughly with an enzyme-based cleaner like Nature’s Miracle®, Urine-Off®, or a solution of one-half white vinegar and one-half water.
• To deter your kitten from house soiling in a specific location, place a food bowl or litter box on a previously soiled spot. If s/he is sniffing around a previously soiled area, carry him/her gently to the litter box; when s/he uses the litter box, offer praise.
• The location of the litter box may be unacceptable to your kitten. Try a different, quieter area—especially find a spot with limited foot traffic and/or noise.
• Another pet may be using the litter box, keeping your kitten away and/or blocking access to the litter box. Some cats will not share a litter box, especially at first. This is a good reason to have multiple boxes if you have multiple pets.
• A person or pet is frightening your new kitten, causing fear-related elimination.
• Your kitten may be responding to stressful events or family and household changes.
• Some cats will only urinate in one box and defecate in another—make sure you have the appropriate number of litter boxes available.

PLEASE BE PATIENT AND CONSISTENT. It can take a few weeks for a kitten to settle—not much to ask of a new friend and companion. NEVER punish the kitten for a mistake.

Feline Body Language

Cats have varied body language. Here are some ways to read their subtler cues:

• Eyes: The pupils tell you a lot—widely dilated pupils indicate fear. Eye contact with a soft look is expressing nice thoughts. When your kitten looks at you, blinks, and then looks away, know that you have been acknowledged but not invited. Slow blinks indicate trust, and we encourage you to return the slow blink back to your kitten.

• Ears: These can catch the slightest sound. When held up, ears are showing that your kitten is happy, relaxed, or playful, but if held up with a more confident stance, they may not be signaling friendliness. Ears flattened are expressing fear or defense.

• Tail: A kitten holding his/her tail straight up is displaying confidence and pride. A bottlebrush tail is a sign of fear. A slow wag indicates mild annoyance (e.g. when a sleeping kitten is awakened). A slow, twitching tail wag indicates that your cat has had enough.

• Purring: This is a sign of affection and contentment for most kittens. When kittens are stressed or injured they will sometime self-soothe with a fast, shallow purr. If you notice that your kitten is injured, please contact your veterinarian—even if s/he is purring.
Cats and kittens use different body postures to communicate their emotions. The above chart shows some common postures you may observe in your kitten. When observing your kitten, you may notice that s/he behaves differently when alone and when in contact with other animals, including people. As kittens become more anxious about their surroundings, their body language may change quickly depending on a perceived threat.
Sleeping and Relaxing

Kittens love high places to perch and look around, and cozy, safe places to hide and sleep. You can buy “kitty condos”, cat shelves, or cat trees or leave suitable closets open. Note: always check that your kitten is not inside before closing anything—especially the clothes dryer!

Letting your kitten sleep on your furniture and relax on your lap will add pleasure and contentment to his/her life and yours. Know that your bedtime may not be the same as your kitten’s. Cats are largely nocturnal. Your kitten’s increased activity during the night or at some early morning hour is not a behavior problem—just instinctual. You can help curb this behavior by playing with your kitten with a wand toy or other favorite toy right before bedtime to tire your cat. Offer a canned food treat after playtime to increase your cat’s satisfaction and help him/her relax.

Playing

Purchase or make a few cat toys to keep your kitten’s mind and body active. Playing and hunting desires can be closely related. A mouse toy can be a fun chase game and allowing the kitten to catch the toy mouse will help satisfy his/her hunting desires. Kittens will play with anything that moves mysteriously! When you play, be sure to avoid wrestling or rough-housing with your hand as this teaches your kitten that it’s okay to use claws and teeth on you.

Avoid string, wool, curling ribbon (used for gift packages), or anything similar as kittens who ingest these items can become seriously ill, require surgery, or even die.

If you work all day, plan to spend extra time with your kitten in the evening. A play session and being petted every evening will help keep him/her happy. Another kitty buddy can also help!

Part of playing with your kitten may include mock hunting: stalking, ambushing, and pouncing. These can be delightful antics to watch. But be aware that anything that moves may be a target (including you). We suggest using a wand toy when encouraging mock hunting—this keeps your hands out reach of playful claws and teeth!

Kittens also incorporate climbing and leaping into play routines. A young kitten can jump two or three times his/her body length. Kittens desire to be on high surfaces to survey their territory for prey or intruders.
Scratching

Scratching is a normal behavior and can be directed to appropriate places. Your kitten scratches to clean away scales from his/her nails, to mark territory, and to feel at home. Providing your kitten with an appropriate place(s) to scratch can help discourage inappropriate scratching. Each kitten has his/her preference of the type of material s/he likes to scratch. Try:

- Cardboard box or cardboard scratcher
- Scratching post with sisal rope
- Carpeted scratching post
- Scratching post with multiple surfaces (may include cardboard, sisal, carpet, and/or wood)

Put the scratcher near a favorite sleeping place—kittens love to stretch and scratch after a nap. Be sure to place scratcher(s) where you and your kitten spend time. A scratching post in an out-of-the-way spot probably will not be used.

If you catch your kitten scratching the furniture or carpet, a simple “no” and placing him/her on the desired scratching area will help. Put catnip on the “right” scratching item to encourage your kitten to use it. A laser pointer can also attract a kitten to a scratching post. Reinforce good behavior by praising and petting whenever s/he uses appropriate places.

If you need to protect a specific item from scratches, use something to block scratching, such as plastic carpet protectors turned upside down so the plastic spikes are pointing outward. This discourages cats from walking over them. You can also use foil or double-sided tape. Products like Sticky Paws Tape® are made specifically for safe use on furniture and other surfaces to discourage scratching, while a product like FELISCRATCH by Feliway can be applied to items (such as a cat tree) that are appropriate for scratching. Keeping your cat’s claws trimmed helps too.

Biting

Some kittens are gentle while others are rowdy and prone to nipping/biting. Choose a kitten who will work well in your household. Biting, even while playing, is natural. You can discourage playful biting and avoid getting your hand bitten by never using your hand as a toy. Biting may also mean that your kitten has had enough petting or playing. Stop what you are doing, say “no” immediately, and let your kitten relax—do not continue to play with him/her.

Stroking your kitten near his/her tail may also elicit biting behavior. Avoid petting in that area if your kitten attempts to bite you. It is a natural reaction to that stimulation. You can train your kitten by playing gently and using toys. Some kittens have their own “no-go “zone” where petting or handling may lead to biting; bellies are an area many cats will not tolerate handling.

On-Going Training

Kittens love routine. Many do the same thing at the same time daily. Something as simple as closing the door to the room they routinely sleep in during the afternoon can cause a behavior change. Watch out for these types of changes to your kitten’s routine when assessing a behavior problem. The best training tools are patience and praising the desirable behavior. If your kitten continues to perform an undesirable behavior, take time to think about the possible causes. Never hit or physically reprimand your kitten!

You can find resources for training and tips for handling behavior problems on our website at: catadoptionteam.org/resources.

Grooming

Cats are great at keeping themselves clean, but kittens can sometimes get especially dirty. If your kitten has become overly dirty, the best thing to do is to clean him/her with specially made cat cleaning wipes, which you can find at most pet supply stores.

If wipes are not enough, you can wash the area that has gotten dirty. Use warm water, kitten shampoo, and a wash cloth to clean the soiled area. Thoroughly rinse the shampoo away with warm water. Do not give the kitten a full bath.

Most kittens are terrified of a hair dryer. Instead, dry your kitten with a warm towel. Keep towels warming in the dryer and change them out until your kitten is completely dry. Remember, a kitten loses heat very fast and can get chilled if not dried warmly and completely.

Brushing and nail trimming are usually the only other grooming a kitten will need. Be prepared for increased shedding in the spring and early summer. Long-haired kittens will need regular brushing during all times of the year. This helps avoid hairballs and matting. Kittens have sensitive skin, so be sure to use a comb/brush made specifically for cats. If you have multiple cats, they may groom one another (called allogrooming). “Displacement grooming” consists of a few agitated licks—for instance, you might see your cat groom briefly after crashing into the back of the couch or rolling off a perch.

Allogrooming, displacement grooming, and other grooming are normal unless your cat is over-grooming to the point of losing hair or causing skin redness or rash.
Should I Declaw My Kitten?

Declawing is a major surgical procedure with a significant risk for short- and long-term side effects. CAT does not advocate declawing your kitten as there are many humane alternatives to redirect inappropriate scratching (see page 12).

Keep claws trimmed. Take your kitten to a groomer or carefully trim the tips off the nails being careful not to cut the quick (the vein that runs down the nails). Ask your veterinarian to instruct you so you can do this at home. You can also buy nail sheaths (such as Soft Paws® or Kitty Caps®), which are little plastic caps that fit over nails to prevent scratching.

How to Trim a Cat’s Claws
©1998 The Humane Society of the United States

Trimming a cat’s claws every few weeks is a vital part of maintaining the animal’s hygiene. Regular trimming not only protects the health of a cat’s handlers, but also guarantees the well-being of adopters’ couches and armchairs. But if the idea of trimming a cat’s claws has you biting your nails, know that all it takes is some patience, a little help from a more experienced person, and plenty of practice to sharpen your skills.

1: Stay on the Cutting Edge
There are plenty of tools available to trim a cat’s claws; use whichever one works best for you and the animal. Some people prefer a special pair of scissors modified to hold a cat’s claw in place; others choose plier-like clippers or those with a sliding “guillotine” blade. Whatever your tool of choice, be sure the blade remains sharp; the blunt pressure from dull blades may hurt an animal and cause a nail to split or bleed.

2: Take Paws, Part I
If you approach a cat with a sharp object in one hand while trying to grab a paw with the other, odds are you’ll come up empty-handed. Because cats’ temperaments and dispositions vary greatly, there is no “perfect” way to handle a cat while trimming his claws. Some cats do well with no restraint at all, but most cats need to be held firmly but gently to make sure that no one gets hurt. Try resting the cat in the crook of one arm while holding one paw with the other hand. Or, place the animal on an examination table and lift one paw at a time. You may even be able to convince a particularly sociable cat to lie back in your lap.
3: Take Paws, Part II
If you’ve got a helper, ask him to hold the cat while you clip the nails, or just ask him to rub the cat’s nose or offer up a special treat. If you’re having a difficult time trimming a cat’s rear claws, try gently scruffing the cat and laying him on his side, then have someone else trim the claws.

4: Take a Little off the Top
Now that you and the cat are in position, put the claw in the right position, too. Take a paw in your hand, curl your fingers into a fist, and use your thumb to gently press down on the joint just above the claw. When the claw extends, quickly but carefully snip off the sharp tip and no more.

Don’t get too close to the pink part of the nail called “the quick,” where blood vessels and nerve endings lie. Just like the pink part of a human fingernail, the quick is very sensitive; cutting into this area will likely hurt the animal and cause bleeding. If this happens, apply a little pressure to the very tip of the claw (without squeezing the entire paw, which would only increase the blood flow) or dip the claw in a bit of styptic powder. Then leave the cat alone, being sure to check on him occasionally.

5: Take it One at a Time
If you aren’t able to trim all 18 nails at once, don’t worry. Few cats remain patient for more than a few minutes, so take what you can get, praise the animal for cooperating, then be on the lookout for the next opportunity—maybe even a catnap—to cut things down to size.
Food

CAT is honored to be a Purina® sponsored shelter. Unless otherwise noted, if you kitten was housed at our shelter, s/he has been fed Purina brand cat food and has used Purina brand litter—all donated by Purina. However, if you adopted your kitten from a foster home or offsite adoption center, s/he may have been fed a different diet. The foster parent or adoption counselor can tell you what the kitten was eating. CAT recommends you continue feeding your adopted kitten the diet that s/he is accustomed to eating.

Always select a food appropriate for your kitten’s age. Consult your veterinarian for the appropriate time to transition your kitten to adult food. Never give your kitten cow’s milk—this will cause diarrhea. Feeding table scraps is not a good idea either as they can cause your kitten to become a finicky eater, upset his/her stomach, and will not provide the complete nutrition s/he needs.

Feeding a premium, high-quality food will improve your kitten’s long-term health. Talk with your veterinarian about your kitten’s individual dietary needs. If you make diet changes, introduce the new food gradually over 7-10 days to prevent gastrointestinal upset.

Kittens (under 1 year old)

- Feed high-quality kitten food. Read the ingredients and look for foods that have meat such as chicken or turkey at the top of the list.
- For kittens age 2-4 months, dry food should be available at all times and canned food should be fed 3 times each day. Always monitor your kitten’s eating habits and weight to ensure they are getting an appropriate amount of food. Your veterinarian can help you determine what is best for your kitten and at what age to limit free access to food.
- Discard any food left after 24 hours before cleaning and refilling the dish.
- Follow amount guidelines on the kitten food bag or prescribed by your veterinarian. Monitor your kitten’s weight and adjust food portions accordingly. If you cannot feel the ribs, s/he may be overweight. This can lead to serious health problems. Several pet food brands have a weight management option.
- Fresh water should be available at all times.
- Place food and water dishes in a safe, quiet place so your cat can eat without being disturbed by people or other pets. The feeding place should be far from the litter box.
Introducing Your New Kitten to Children

If there is a child/children in your household or if they regularly visit, it is important to teach them how to appropriately handle and interact with your new kitten. Proper behavior will help keep kids safe and avoid stressing the kitten. Children learn responsibility from good examples, so always guide children and regularly monitor their interaction with your kitten.

Here are some guidelines to help your children and your new kitten live happily together:

- A kitten should be picked up and held with one hand under his/her chest and the other hand supporting his/her hindquarters.
- Remind children to handle kittens gently and not to squeeze too tightly. Most children under 5 years old struggle to hold a kitten properly. It is a natural instinct for children to grab and squeeze when a kitten tries to wiggle away from them. To avoid an incident that could potentially hurt the kitten or child, have the child sit down calmly while you place the kitten in his/her lap. Encourage the child to pet the kitten gently and to allow the kitten to leave if s/he attempts to do so. This way, everyone is safe and happy.
- Children should not try to interact with a kitten when s/he is sleeping, eating, drinking, or using the litter box.
- A kitten should not be dragged out of hiding against his/her will—this could lead to fear-related scratching or biting.
- Children should not chase the kitten. If cornered and frightened, a kitten may scratch and bite and/or may become timid and aloof over time.
- Never leave young children alone with a new kitten.
- Teach children appropriate play and petting. Provide safe toys for the kitten and limit children’s access to potentially dangerous items, such as string.
- Teach children to look for signals that show that the kitten is becoming irritated or over-stimulated. A swishing tail, ears back, gentle nips—all can lead to being scratched or bitten.
- Always allow the kitten to escape if s/he tries to run.
- Never allow rough handling, as this teaches the kitten that it is okay to be rough back!
Introducing Your New Kitten to Other Pets

Before introducing your new kitten to your other pets, make sure your existing pets are current with their vaccinations. Introducing your kitten to other pets should be done slowly. Prepare a spare room (like a bathroom, home office, or guest bedroom) where your new cat can reside for a while before being introduced to the other pets (see page 5). REMEMBER—it may take a month or more for the new kitten to be accepted.

Kitten to Cat

- If your new kitten is showing signs of illness like sneezing, watery eyes, diarrhea, vomiting, etc., please don’t introduce him/her to your existing cat until you consult with your veterinarian—things like upper respiratory infections can spread easily.
- Generally, your resident cat will get along better with a new kitten of the opposite sex. However, personality is the biggest factor in whether cats get along with one another.
- Make sure the new kitten has a place to him/herself for at least 10 days; allowing plenty of time to adjust so the meeting is successful. First impressions are important to cats, so avoid early and unplanned meetings that could go badly.
- Spend time with your new kitten out of sight of your existing cat. And be sure to lavish attention on your existing cat.
- After your kitten becomes comfortable in the safe room and is not showing any signs of illness, swap the sleeping blankets or beds used by your new kitten with those used by your current cat(s) so they each have a chance to become accustomed to each other’s scents. You can even rub a towel or blanket on one cat and put it the room with the other cat to give them a chance to experience the new scent without being face-to-face.
- Once your new kitten is behaving comfortably in the safe room, give him/her free time in the house while confining your other animals to the kitten’s room. This switch provides another way for the animals to experience each other’s scents without a face-to-face meeting. It also allows the newcomer to become familiar with his/her new surroundings without being frightened by the other animals.
- Try feeding your resident cat on the outside of the safe room door while you feed your new kitten on the inside of the safe room door. Although they cannot see each other, this is another way for them to begin bonding. You can also line treats along the doorway to encourage them to interact under a door.
- After several comfortable, monitored introductions between pets—best if done through a baby gate—you can increase the amount of time and space that the new kitten can explore outside his/her safe room.
- When you are confident that your new kitten is adjusting well, take him/her to a quiet room and allow your resident cat to investigate the newcomer. Allow short periods of contact at first, increasing as time goes by.
• It is normal for cats to hiss and growl at each other. An all-out physical attack is rare. Never break up a fight with your hands! Use a broom to avoid getting bitten or scratched.

• Once the new kitten has been given access to the rest of the house, leave his/her safe room intact so s/he may take refuge there. Improvement in your cats’ attitudes toward each other should begin soon thereafter. Do not be discouraged if it takes longer. The adjustment period will depend on the cats’ personalities and how long your existing cat was a solitary pet.

• Be sure to lavish attention on all your cats to make everyone feel a part of the family.

• If all goes well, you will find them sleeping together and playing joyfully. The social interaction level may vary; you may have cats who just tolerate each other’s existence and that is okay too!

Kitten to Dog

• First, as a precaution, prepare a safe room (see page 5) and have a clear escape route set for your new kitten. Make sure the dog does not have access to the kitten’s food and water and especially the litter box! Use a baby gate to block the dog’s access if necessary.

• After your new kitten becomes comfortable in his/her safe room and is not showing any signs of illness, swap the sleeping blankets or beds used by your new kitten with those used by your dog(s) so they each have a chance to become accustomed to each other’s scents. You can even rub a towel or blanket on one animal and put it the room with the other animal to give them a chance to experience the new scent without being face-to-face.

• Once your new kitten is behaving comfortably in the safe room, give him/her free time in the house while confining your other pets to the kitten’s room. This switch provides another way for the animals to experience each other’s scents without a face-to-face meeting. It also allows the newcomer to become familiar with his/her new surroundings without being frightened by the other animals.

• When introducing your new kitten to a dog for the first time, put the kitten on a raised surface like a table or dresser. This will help the kitten feel less threatened. Put your dog on a leash or keep him/her in a carrier or kennel. Allow them to sniff each other (try to keep the leash loose) and then distract the dog with a treat or praise. The kitten should also receive a treat at the same time. It is normal for a kitten to hiss and growl at first, especially if s/he has not lived with a dog before.

• Cats take time to adjust to changes; the more the animals are together in the same room (with your supervision), the more quickly they’ll adjust.

• You can throw a towel over the kitten if s/he attacks the dog. Make sure your kitten has an escape route or can leap to a high place or hide under something low. Do not let the dog corner the kitten or vice versa. If this happens, you will want to start the process over and return the kitten to the safe room for a few days.
• Until you are completely comfortable with the situation, separate your pets from one another when you are not there to supervise.

• If your kitten hides, don’t worry. Keep the dog around as much as possible so your kitten can get used to the dog’s presence. Make sure your new kitten has a private place, not accessible to the dog, where s/he can eat and drink in peace and feel safe. Ensure your kitten has unthreatened access to his/her litter box.

• Allow the pets to adjust in their own time—be patient and act calm and relaxed. Often they become friends; sometimes they just tolerate each other. Either way, you should respect the arrangement.

Kitten to Small Animals

Remember, kittens are curious. Fish, rabbits, rodents, birds, etc., should be protected from an inquisitive kitten. These animals are a cat’s natural prey and may become very stressed around your new kitten, especially if s/he is sitting on top of or nearby their house. Make sure cages are secure and well maintained.
Medical Treatment

While in CAT’s care, the kitten you adopted may have received the following vaccines and/or treatments. Your kitten’s medical record will list treatments and procedures along with due dates for boosters. Take these records with you to your first veterinary appointment, which should be scheduled in the first month after adoption (earlier if due dates fall in that month).

FVRCP Vaccine: This is a standard vaccine administered to cats. Kittens and some cats may need additional doses administered by your veterinarian over a period of weeks to achieve maximum immunity from diseases.

Rabies Vaccine: All cats and kittens over 16 weeks old receive a rabies vaccination.

FeLV Vaccine: Some kittens may have received this vaccine from a previous shelter. Kittens will need a second vaccine to ensure they are fully protected.

FeLV/FIV Test: Your kitten was tested for feline leukemia (FeLV) and feline immunodeficiency virus (FIV). You should have received the results with your kitten’s paperwork (see FeLV/FIV Test Results, next page).

Deworming: A dose of medicine to eliminate roundworms was given. Your kitten also may have received a medication to treat for tapeworms. Do not be surprised to see worms passed in your kitten’s stools for up to five days—this is normal following treatment. We may include a dose of de-worming medication to take home. Instructions for how and when to give this dewormer will be included with the medication. Continued treatment and other types of parasite control may be provided by your veterinarian depending on your cat’s individual needs.

Wood’s Lamp Exam: Your cat has been examined under a wood’s lamp at our shelter (or at a previous shelter) to help detect ringworm. This exam will catch most instances of ringworm, but not all. There is no guarantee that your cat has not been exposed to ringworm.

Microchip: Your cat was implanted with a microchip that can be detected by scanners at animal shelters and veterinary offices. CAT also registers this microchip for you. If you move or change your phone number be sure to update your information with the microchip registry and CAT (see page 27).
Flea/Parasite Control: Many products exist that protect your cat from fleas and parasites. Ask your veterinarian for information on different approaches to fleas. Your cat has received a dose of flea treatment.

Spaying/Neutering: All cats are spayed or neutered before the adoption is finalized and they are released to their adoptive homes.

FeLV/FIV Test Results

Unless otherwise noted, your new cat has tested negative for feline leukemia virus (FeLV) and feline immunodeficiency virus (FIV). However, it is important to realize that these tests can only detect the virus once antibodies have been created. The process of creating antibodies can take up to 60 days after initial exposure. For the most accurate results, you may wish to retest a kitten once s/he reaches 6 months of age (it may take this long for maternal antibodies to clear from the kitten’s system).

Common Kitten Illnesses

Because a kitten’s immune system is not well developed, s/he is more susceptible to upper respiratory infections (see next page), eye and ear infections, and diarrhea. These conditions are usually easily treated with care, time, and medication. If the diarrhea is constant, contact your veterinarian. Repeated bouts of diarrhea can be very serious, as dehydration can occur very quickly in kittens.

If your kitten becomes lethargic, sneezes for more than a day or two, rubs his ears or shakes his head, vomits repeatedly, or has persistent eye discharge, these are all signs that s/he is sick and needs to be taken to the vet as soon as you can.

Always use a cat carrier or well-fitting harness and leash when you take your kitten outside of your home!
Upper Respiratory Infections

Your kitten may experience cold symptoms when you get home. Kittens are subject to airborne viral diseases that are very similar to the common cold experienced by humans. This is called URI (Upper Respiratory Infection), and it is not uncommon in shelter settings. We do all we can to prevent its spread, including carefully disinfecting our kennels and vaccinating each cat with FVRCP vaccine.

Despite our best efforts, some kittens will come down with URI.

When a number of kittens are housed in a common area, a single sneeze from a cat can expose all the others, just like a cold is spread through a classroom. Also, all the kittens in the shelter are under stress just by virtue of being here, which lowers their resistance to illness.

If your kitten begins to sneeze or have runny eye(s) or nose within a few days after you get him/her home, it’s possible that your cat has URI. The virus is contagious to other cats. We highly recommend that you separate the cat(s) showing URI symptoms from other cats in the home (this virus is not spread to humans or dogs).

URI symptoms typically last for 7 to 10 days, and they may vary in intensity a great deal (just like a cold!). Your kitten may sneeze, have discharge from his/her eyes and nose, may drool, and breathe with difficulty through his/her mouth. Your kitten may lose his/her appetite and even stop drinking. If you see yellow/green discharge, drooling/mouth-breathing, or loss of appetite/thirst, you should see a veterinarian as soon as possible to determine a treatment plan. You may wish to use the free exam certificate you received with your adoption.

Feline Infectious Peritonitis

Feline Infectious Peritonitis (FIP) is a disease that most cat owners will never have to deal with first hand. It affects about 1 in 100 cats—most under the age of two.

The first symptoms of FIP present similarly to URI. If your cat shows any sign of illness, please take him/her to a veterinarian, who can diagnose the situation and provide more information.

Our shelter attempts to keep records of kittens and cats adopted from us who are diagnosed with FIP in order to better understand the disease and its risk factors. If your cat is diagnosed with FIP, please contact the shelter and give us all the information that you can.

You can find out more about FIP online at: www2.vet.cornell.edu/departments-centers-and-institutes/cornell-feline-health-center/health-information/feline-health-topics/feline-infectious-peritonitis
Post-Adoption Veterinary Care

While CAT does everything possible to make sure your new kitten is healthy at the time of adoption, CAT cannot guarantee the current or future health of any animal adopted from us.

Any illness(es) discovered post-adoption are the sole responsibility of the new family. If during the first two weeks after adoption your kitten becomes sick, you may make a veterinary appointment at CAT. However, we encourage you to seek medical treatment from your family veterinarian whenever possible. CAT supplies each adopter with a list of local veterinarians who will honor the free veterinary exam certificate that you received at the time of your adoption.

The Cat Adoption Team is not responsible for the cost of any treatments, office visits, or medications provided by an outside veterinarian and will not reimburse any such expenses.
Keeping Your Kitten Healthy and Managing Veterinary Costs

Costs for veterinary care have risen over the past several years, while the options for treatment of illness and injuries continue to expand. CAT encourages adopters to explore options that may help ensure you are never faced with giving up a pet or leaving a serious medical problem untreated due to cost. Pet insurance and wellness plans are two options that have become increasingly popular to help you provide excellent veterinary care for your kitten while managing veterinary costs.

Pet Insurance

There are numerous providers of veterinary insurance and they vary widely in what they cost and what they cover. As with health insurance for people, some plans cost less and are limited to catastrophic care while other plans cover more preventive care. All kittens adopted from CAT are eligible to receive their first month of insurance through PetFirst Healthcare for $5 (see details on the next page).

Wellness Plans

Many veterinary hospital chains and some independent veterinary clinics offer pet wellness plans. A wellness plan typically involves paying a monthly fee that covers specific types of preventive and maintenance care for your pet(s) during the year. For example, a monthly fee may cover office visits, annual vaccines, and dental cleaning.

Why do I need pet insurance? With PetFirst, there is no need to worry about unexpected veterinary expenses. From a visit to your veterinarian to a late night visit to the emergency clinic, you can give your pet the best care available while controlling the costs.

Coverage continues automatically. Your pet insurance coverage automatically renews after the first 30 days for $14.95 per month for dogs and cats of all ages.

“I have to say PetFirst impressed me very much. The pet insurance offer sounded too good to be true, but when Carrie got her first PetFirst reimbursement, I was converted quickly just like you promised.” – Carol of Pepper Pike, OH
Microchip Registration

When you adopt from CAT, we register your new kitten’s microchip with Michelson Found Animals at no additional charge.

Found Animals will receive the contact information that you gave us at the time of the adoption. This enables them to contact you if your kitten becomes lost and is taken to a veterinarian or shelter where they scan for a microchip. You will receive an email within two weeks of adoption from Found Animals about your microchip registration.*

We make every attempt to provide you with a microchip sticker showing your new kitten’s microchip number. However, there are some instances where this is not possible. If you did not receive a microchip sticker showing your new kitten’s microchip number, you can find this information in your cat’s paperwork or by contacting CAT.

Because CAT registers microchips with Found Animals, be sure to contact them if you wish to make changes to your kitten’s registration or to report if your kitten has gone missing. You may choose to register independently with another microchip company—please be aware that there may be a fee associated with additional registration.

If you move or your phone number changes, please update your records with CAT and Found Animals (as well as any other microchip company with which you have registered).

Staying Indoors—The Best Way to Keep Your Kitten Safe

Caring for your kitten includes keeping him/her away from danger.

Put a safety collar and ID tag on your kitten right away!

Unfortunately, despite our best efforts to keep them in, many indoor-only cats do get outside. Your kitten’s microchip will be a great help if s/he is found and taken to a vet clinic or shelter, but a visible ID tag is your best defense. Without proper ID, someone who finds your kitten outdoors may think that s/he is a stray and take him/her in as their own, never checking to see if the kitten has a current microchip and owner.

Of course, always watch the door. Never leave it standing open, even for a few minutes. Kittens are quick! Once outside, an indoor-only cat will have no idea what to do and have absolutely no street smarts. Dangers abound!

Most cat collars now have safety features like a breakaway clasp or some elastic in the collar. These safety measures help to keep cats from getting trapped by the collar getting caught on something and from being strangled by the collar. You can make an ID tag right here at CAT and at most other pet supply stores.

We recommend including language that denotes your kitten as “indoor-only” and includes the best phone number to reach you. If there’s space, you may choose to include your kitten’s name and your address as well. A tag with all of this information helps ensure that anyone who finds your cat will know s/he is lost and will have a way to contact you. For example:

Re-homing Your Kitten

You have made a commitment to your new kitten, one that will hopefully last a lifetime.

However, we recognize that sometimes you may encounter problems. If you find yourself struggling to bond with your kitten or if you are having other issues, contact the Adoption Counselor who helped you at the time of your adoption (you can find their contact phone and email on the adoption contract). You can also get helpful information, including tips on resolving behavior problems, at catadoptionteam.org/resources. Hopefully there is a solution that will keep you and your cat together. For additional assistance, you may wish to contact the CAT Helpline by sending an email to helpline@catadoptionteam.org.

If a new home is the best option, CAT urges you to use our re-homing tips to find the right new home for your kitten (catadoptionteam.org/surrender).

Within the first 60 days after adoption, you can make an appointment to return your cat to our shelter. To make a return appointment, please contact the CAT Intake & Helpline at (503) 925-8903 x2. We will do our best to accommodate you, but please note that appointment times are limited and there may be a wait before we can schedule your return appointment.

In some cases, an exchange for another kitten or adult cat may be offered. Depending on the reason for surrender, we may place restrictions on the cat you select to help ensure a more suitable match for your family and lifestyle. For instance, if the kitten you selected did not interact well with kids, it will be important that the next kitten has a good history with children.

If your adopted cat has been with you for more than 60 days, CAT will always be a resource for you but may not be able to take the kitten back into the shelter. Such decisions depend on a number of factors, including our available space at the shelter at that time. Please visit catadoptionteam.org/resources/surrender-to-cat for more information about CAT’s return and intake options.

Animals in our lives provide us with companionship, love, and the opportunity to share our lives with another species. Bringing a new cat into your family is a responsibility to take seriously. Our feline friends are an important part of our lives and working through behavioral and medical issues can actually deepen our bonds with our pets.

All of us at the Cat Adoption Team want to help you resolve any issues and help you make the best decision for your unique situation. Please contact us with any questions you may have. We are glad to assist you!

Thank you for choosing to provide a homeless cat with a wonderful life!
